The Vanishing Horizon

Salisbury Arts Centre

I am sitting there with my friend, waiting for it to start; then the room suddenly goes dark and the play begins. The Vanishing Horizon was about how the amazing invention of airplanes brings together two separate generations of one family.

There was a lot of emotion during this play because the granddaughter had never met her grandmother before and she had found out that she was dead and went on this journey to her grandmother's to look at her house, get her ashes and then scatter them somewhere. During the journey she meets one of her grandmother's dear friends at her grandmother's house and she tells her a bit about her. During the show we are also seeing the grandmother when she was young, being amazed by airplanes and then having an amazing journey throughout.

This was a very good play that was just so clever and emotional at the same time in how it brought together two people who had never really met and then took them both on a very heart hitting journey across the world to different countries where the grandmother had lived her life. So I would definitely recommend this to people as it was just so cleverly portrayed in a theatrical style of performance.
