

The Festival- 24th May

Salisbury Arts Centre in Salisbury International Arts Festival

The Festival was not what I expected. I thought there would be a lot of dancing but I hadn't realised there would be singing. It was a nice surprise that was not expected and I really liked the fact that they were singing. I loved the first song as it was so catchy and joyful – 'a cup of coffee and a peppermint tea'.

They performed in such a small space with very little props which in my opinion made it more intimate. The performers acted as a few different characters which was at times confusing but still interesting and it made sure people were paying attention otherwise it could get really confusing.

The dancing was really good, in one dance the timing was impeccable, I couldn't guess at what was going to happen next but they knew what they were doing and it really paid off. They must have practiced a lot to get it as perfect as they did.

Overall it was an amazing performance. I overheard one lady say 'I don't what it was but somehow it just put a smile on my face'. I think this is a really good description because it did make you smile, but when you look back, you have no idea why.
