

International arts festival: La La Luna

By Jack Reeve

Imagine if the moon went out and you were the person responsible for fixing it, well this is what La La Luna is about. The moon goes out and there is one man who goes on an exciting, magical, creative and funny adventure to get it lit back up.

La La Luna is more a physical performance than a vocal performance, so there is not much talking throughout, but it is still very funny and clever and amuses people of all ages and genders. This performance is a one-man performance by a man called Wolfe Bowart. I got an interview with Wolfe himself and he said "I have always been a trickster and I have always had a passion to entertain. I got 4 degrees in drama and went to university to study the subject further. When I got into showbiz I went to Hollywood and I got a crime script produced into a show but I didn't want that, so I quit and went to perform around the world to people of all ages".

So in conclusion I think that La La Luna is a must-see play for all the family, so if you get the chance to see it do because it is funny, clever and all round brilliant.
